Reasons for Allowance

Claims 1-36, 52-87, 103-138, and 154 are allowed.

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

Applicant's invention is drawn to a wireless communication system, apparatus, and computer program. More specifically, applicant's invention includes a plurality of communication stations as part of an ad hoc network without a relationship of a control station and controlled stations. The respective communication stations transmit beacons with information concerning a network described thereon with each other to configure said network without using an access point. In addition, the information concerning a network includes indications of beacons received from other communication stations that are part of the network. Moreover, a beacon is transmitted from a local station including neighboring communication station information pertaining to a reception time at the location station of a beacon transmitted from the neighboring communication station.

Applicant's independent claims 1, 52, 103, and 154 each recites, inter alia, a beacon transmitted from a local station includes neighboring communication station information pertaining to a reception time at said local station of a beacon transmitted from the neighboring communication station. Benveniste, Nyman, Kennedy, and Liu substantially disclose various features of the claimed invention but fail to explicitly or implicitly teach a beacon transmitted from a local station includes neighboring communication station information pertaining to a reception time at said local station of a beacon transmitted from the neighboring communication station (emphasis added). The cited references as well as a thorough search fail to disclose or suggest this feature. Furthermore, it would not have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to arrive at applicant's invention, unless one was using applicant's claims and specification as a roadmap, thus using impermissible hindsight. Applicant's claims 1, 52, 103, and 154 comprise a particular combination of elements, which is neither taught nor suggest by the prior art.

Accordingly, applicant's invention is allowed for these reasons, applicant's amendments, and arguments.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
